

---

DIANA BLANCHARD

---

"Our ability to make individual statements and to mix antique pieces with modern counterparts creates a truly eclectic English look that is often replicated elsewhere, throughout the world. One aspect of this look is created by displaying personal collections that revive happy, nostalgic memories such as books, historical photographs or memorabilia chosen over the years. These add a unique personal touch as well as creating an interesting focal and talking point within a room. Also, what could be more quintessentially English than the working fireplace? Arrange beeswax candles in the hearth during the summer months for a focal point"